Melvin Boarg Reviews CLASSIC CRIME NOVELS

Leading piggy pen-pusher Melvin Boarg introduces 'Crim' readers to some masterpieces of crime fiction...

THE LONG PORK PIE
By Larry Hammer
Piggy Marlowe investigates foul play in this farrowed. Farkle with 'Bulldog Drummond' as a classic of P.I. (Pig Investigation) fiction.

THE MYSTERY OF THE SPECKLED FROG
by Sir Arthur Conan-Barbarian
The world's greatest detective solves a mystery in which the only clues are a stuffed wombat, a dead fish, and a length of string. Noone hints the cook over the head with the wombat to gain a confession, then lets him up with the string. The fish is a real herring.

TEN LITTLE PIGS
by Agatha Christie
Classic 'whodunnit' in which Miss Marple investigates a series of mysterious disappearances at a very posh little school. What I really like the surprise ending, in which Marple confesses to throwing the victims in the river, and is found guilty under the 1937 Water Pollution Act.

STIG SAVAGE GOES TO SMUGGLERS' TOP
by Eric Bighy
A rare venture into hard-hitting adult fiction by this famous children's author. Tough-talking private eye Stig Savage catches some naughty crooks in this wizard adventure, and is rewarded with a slap-up feast of sea and cream buns.
